

SIOBHAN McNALLY

First-world problems SOLVED!

HOTTIES

PLAY FOOTSIE

Shoemaker to the stars Jimmy Choo intends to float on the London Stock Exchange this week, which my brilliant business brain tells me can only be a good thing - unless female investors start hiding their purchases in the back of the wardrobe.

I know! This is like the Money page or something. Next week, I explain equity derivatives.

SEX IS THE PIT'S

German sexologist and former model Ann-Marlene Henning has written a new sex education book for teenagers called Sex & Lovers, promising to do for young people what The Joy of Sex did for their parents.

Not sure how free love, hairy armpits and a rather musky lax attitude to deodorant will go down with the iGeneration. Goodness knows, I've been trying to convince them for years.

Want a saucy peek at a hack like me?

IT may surprise you to learn that despite uploading all my naked photos on iCloud, I still haven't been hacked.

What's a girl gotta do to get a bit of overexposure round here? Well I suppose I could let those shots of me doing an erotic fan dance with two copies of the Mirror "accidentally" fall into the wrong hands, and then get my press agent to leak the news. As soon as he stops laughing, that is.

Or perhaps I could publicly invite digital intruders by waving my hands in the air and saying "Cooeeeee, over here," like former reality TV star Sophie Anderton when she tweeted, "I do wish someone would stop hacking my iCloud."

It's true smartphones weren't invented solely for the purposes of sharing nude selfies (I know this - I've spent hours checking the small print), but the first thing people think about when they get a new gadget, is how can I have sex with it? So it's hardly surprising to find out that celebrities like Kim Kardashian, Amber Heard and Jennifer Lawrence have been making love to the camera like the rest of us.

The difference being no one wants my naked selfies when they can get themselves some starker celebrities.

And while photos of them in varying states of undress are now available from a discussion forum near you for £50 a pop, I can't give mine away.

Although I'm not quite sure why a hacker would bother to raid Rihanna's iCloud. Most pictures of her in the buff are in the public domain anyway. In fact I am better acquainted with the singer's boobs than I am my own.

However, the 50 leaked topless photos of Johnny Depp's fiancée Amber do go some way to explaining why Depp hasn't had a decent movie out recently.

But the actress says she won't be taking this violation of her privacy lying down. Well, not any more. I suspect these celebrities won't be the last ones to have their privates plastered all over the internet.

If you're an actress or singer, then having a sexy selfie is the modern equivalent of an Equity card - you still have to flash it every time you're up for a new part.

And now that sexting is the new foreplay in our hook-up culture, we're all storing rudey nudeys on our smartphones.

In the olden days, a gentleman caller would ask a lady for a keepsake - now he wants a saucy snap of a her bumpy bits, not a pressed flower.

In this digital age, sexting can also keep the romance alive between married couples. Expressing their feelings through the medium of selfies is just a new platform for deeper understanding between the sexes... and an opportunity for a quick nag.

That bum selfie says: "I love you, dude, but if you forget to put the bins out, you're out on your ass..."

CLOUD BURST
Jennifer Lawrence

I'm better acquainted with Rihanna's boobs than my own

WHAT THE HASHTAGS SHOULD REALLY SAY...

Solving the climate crisis is not a question of politics. It is a moral obligation #theybetternottaxsuperyachts
Hairy eco-warrior Leonardo DiCaprio saves the planet by not shaving

Can't believe I somehow managed to get myself to Bath today #betterknownforshoweringinherBristols
Ex-soap actress Helen Flanagan resumes normal service despite brunette dye job

Literally got out of bed, went downstairs and scoffed 3 Oreo cookies. For no reason.

#foodneverpassesmylipsy
New Essex girl Michelle Keegan has forgotten that hunger makes you eat

Achingly bad web health advice

When not figuring out how to solve the big issues like climate change or global poverty, I love doing online tests.

Anything from What Sort Of Cult Should You Join? (hippy commune with a dark secret) to How Fast Can You Read? (entire Game of Thrones collection in 212 days - but why would you want to?). But my favourite is Isabel, the online symptom checker. Only yesterday morning I was feeling tired and headachy, my joints hurt, and frankly I was bored. So I typed in my symptoms, gave a few more details like "fat chance" when asked if pregnant, and waited for my results.

I expect my GP will be thrilled to hear I'm not just malingering and I've actually got Giant Cell Arteritis or Sarcoidosis.

Although I'm a bit concerned Isabel says the term "bored" may not have influenced the final result. Which is silly - we all know a person can DIE of boredom.

KIDS MOVIE OF THE WEEK

Facebook status "bored at work"? Then catch up with this week's viral video:

TITLE: Funny goats balancing on sheet metal (now with sound added)

STARRING: The Billy Goats Gruff and flexible steel ribbon in a supporting role

BEST LINE: Couple of teenage troglodytes screeching in their bedroom and wobbling a metal tray provide the soundtrack

PLOT: Grim old Norwegian fairy tale gets modern Disney reworking when a group of sad goats in a French field decide to trip-trapp across the bridge to a better life. But instead of alerting a big ugly troll who wants to gobble them up, the bridge turns out to be a fabulously bendy plaything that awakens their true happiness. Wheeeeeeee! The end.

» You think you're having problems with the recent invasion of giant spiders, but spare a thought for gone-off-the-boil-a-bit hottie Keanu Reeves who keeps finding female intruders in his house.

Last week a desperate fan was hauled out of the star's swimming pool, but two days before that, Keanu, 50, was woken at 4am by sounds coming from his library. Anyway, cops say they detained a 40-year-old woman who Keanu said "obviously did not belong there", missing out "because she's far too old for me".

CROFTON RESOURCES

NOTTIES

WAISTED ON ME

If there was any news to come out of London Fashion Week, it was that the waist will be back next spring. So this is possibly not the ideal time for Krispy Kreme to launch their doughnut-inspired milkshakes.

Mind you, who'd want 612 calories in liquid form apart from a few gastric band cheats?

SO OUT OF DATE

Time at the bar has been called on cheesy chat-up lines and replaced by silent speed-dating nights.

Shhh Dating invited me to one of their events in London this week but the thought of gazing at someone and making a "deeper, more instantaneous connection" made me want to poke my eyes out with a sharp stick.

Still, it would have made for a memorable date once they'd stemmed the flow of blood.

HUNGER GAMES
Michelle

