HOTTIES

A CRUSH ON CLEGG

Married dating site IllicitEncounters.com managed to get their members to stop bonking like bunnies for a minute to vote for the politicians they'd most like to have a fling with.

Over 19% of the ladies said they may not vote for Nick Clegg's party but they'd definitely pull him at one. While a staggering 33% fancied a rummage in ladies' man Boris Johnson's policy box. Surely they mean... again?

PUT YOUR X ON SEX

Former sex worker Charlotte Rose, who appeared in TV doc Love for Sale with Rupert Everett, is to stand as an Independent MP in next week's Clacton by-election. "My main policy is about sexual freedom - taking control away from others," says the dominatrix without a hint of irony.

Charlotte, who claims to have slept with more than 1,000 men, says she is now ready for a life in politics. Personally I think she should join the Tories - they'd screw anyone too.

NOTTIES

KEYED OFF BY APP

A banking mobile app called Fortune Teller - the hi-tech equivalent of going shopping with your mum - has been launched in the States.

The nagging app crosschecks the price of an item with your income and tells you sarcastically when you can't afford it: "Remember that time you won the lottery? I don't either."

Well, two can play at that game. I look forward to customers replying: "That's it - I'm deleting you. Oh, didn't you see that coming?"

It's Paris Match for Kim and daughter

REALITY mogul and high priestess of fashion Kim Kardashian has committed the cardinal "mommy" sin of dressing up like her daughter North West.

Even in the totally bonkers world of fashion and showbiz, using your one-year-old as an accessory is one thing... but making her matchy-matchy is quite another.

Going "head to head" in the fashion stakes, or playing "who wore it best?" isn't something a grown woman does with her toddler child.

Well, not outside the pages of a Boden catalogue where mummies often express their happiness by matching the lining of their skirts with their daughter's dresses.

OK, I can see the advantages of dressing your mini-me in the family's favourite black leather outfit as it's good, hard-wearing wipe-clean material.

But surely sticking big diamond studs within reach of little hands is just asking for trouble - the minute one of those babies goes missing, you'll be on 24-hour nappy watch. And I speak as someone who has made the embarrassing mistake of dressing my daughter Jesse in the same stripy Breton top as myself, and ended up looking like Marcel Marceau and his mini-mime.

SEXY Nori and mum Kim rock the see-through look

So I can understand that perhaps if you have a style you like, you naturally want your offspring to look good in it too, it's just that most of us are happy to draw the line at kinky daywear.

But not Kim. Just this week, the Mom Monster horrified the fashionistas at Paris Fashion Week by working the same sheer black ensemble as baby Nori - and in the process possibly alerting social workers back home.

See-through and black lace not really being high on the list of approved child-friendly materials, along with PVC and latex.

Still, dressing your tot in sexy togs on the FROW won't stop the big fashion houses inviting Kim and her Three-Ringed Circus into town. The column inches she creates are the true measure of their moral compass, but I'm certainly crossing her off my List of Favourite Elaborate Body Parts. And it was a short list too - just her bottom, Mickey Rourke's wig and Courtney Stodden's rack.

I hate to come over all judgey, but someone needs to remind Kim that our kids have this nasty habit of growing up into someone who is completely different from us. I know, totally ungrateful. But a child is not just for catwalks, it's for life.

DOGU-DRAMA OF THE WEEK

Don't make everyone else in the office look bad by being efficient, put your feet up and enjoy this week's viral video:

TITLE: Patient dogs say grace before dinner by Petsami

STARRING: Three chocolate Labradors and the voice of their owner

BEST LINE: "Lord help me to stay out of the street and not chase any cars"

PLOT: Some people think that Labradors are so dim that they're completely untrainable. Yet here's proof that not only do they understand English, they're deeply religious. Nothing at all to do with the fact that every time they go to eat out of their bowl, they read GOD BOWL, no, siree...
